GREEN MOUNTAIN AND THE WHITE TIGER

青山白虎

This small series of fountain pens is dedicated to the theme white Tiger in the Green Peacock Stone Mountains

The White Tiger is a very ancient mythological figure in China. It is called Bái Hǔ and is one of the Four Celestial Guardians. The White Tiger represents: the West and autumn, metal and strength, protection and military power, courage, dignity, and supernatural strength

Green, or (Qīng), is closely associated with the East and the Dragon in Chinese color symbolism. The combination of the White Tiger and the green landscape therefore creates a symbolic tension: two distinct cosmological worlds of color and the heavens collide.

In the Tujia culture, the white tiger is regarded as a totem; the tiger is seen as an ancestral spirit and a symbol of a deep connection to the mountains.
In the Shanshui aesthetic the landscape is regarded as a living spiritual world. Mountains, forests, mist, rocks, and animals form a unified whole.
